Wall Magazine Launch by Economics Department 2021-2022

Students of the Economics Department prepared a Wall Magazine on 'Circular Flow of Income' which was displayed on 9/12/2021. Circular Flow of Income is one of the most important topics of Macroeconomics. The circular flow of income or circular flow is a model of the economy in which the major exchanges are represented as flows of money, goods and services, etc. between different economic agents such as household, firm, banks and financial institutions, government and foreign economy.

Students and teachers of the Department of Economics were present in the event.

1. The celebration is observed on the 15th March with World Consumer Rights Day every year, to promote creating global awareness about consumer rights and needs.

2. Considering this day is a reminder to ensure that the rights of all consumers are respected and protected, and to protect against market abuses and unfair practices which undermine these rights.

3. World Consumer Rights Day was initiated by Monsieur Jules K. Boreddy, who sent a letter of proposal to the UN Secretary in 1977 March 1982, in which he strongly outlined the need of consumer rights. It was the first world leader to do so.

4. The consumer movement has started from 1962 to 1982 and has been the day every year to promote awareness about consumer rights and needs.

- Q Digital financial services have created new risks along with a significant reduction in risk. How can we ensure that consumers are not left behind in an increasingly digital world?
- Q It is more important now than ever to build on our knowledge and work together to understand what the financial services look like in a digital world.
- Q Achieving fair digital finance for all requires a global, collaborative, and coordinated approach. The rapidly evolving and complex nature of digital financial services demonstrate the need for innovative regulatory approaches and digital financial services and products that serve consumer protection and empowerment.

Report on World Consumer Rights Day 2022

Khatra Adibasi Mahavidyalaya, Bankura

World Consumer Rights Day is celebrated every year on 15th March throughout the world as a means of raising global awareness about consumer rights and needs. On 15.03.2022 the Economics Department and the Commerce Department of our college, under the aegis of IQAC, organized a seminar to celebrate World Consumer Rights Day. This year the theme was 'Fair Digital Finance'. About 50 participants (including teachers and students) were present in the seminar. The programme began with the inaugural speech delivered by Dr. Nityananda Patra, Principal, Khatra Adibasi Mahavidyalaya. Dr. Kamalika Chakraborty, Assistant Professor of Economics and Shri Kalyan Kanti Dutta, Assistant Professor of Commerce spoke on important issues related to World Consumer Rights Day. Dr. Kamalika Chakraborty made a PowerPoint Presentation on the theme of World Consumer Rights Day 2022 i.e., 'Fair Digital Finance' before the students and explained the relevance of this theme in today's world. At the end of the presentation queries from the students were answered by the speaker.

Objectives

The main objectives of this seminar were:

- a) to draw the attention of the students to market malpractices, which undermine the rights of consumers and what more can be done to empower buyers
- b) to make students aware about the risks related to the use of digital financial services
- c) to aware students about the enhanced risks related to digital finance at the time of COVID 19 pandemic
- d) to discuss about the need for innovative regulatory approaches and digital financial services and products that give importance to consumer protection and empowerment.

Outcomes

The outcomes of this seminar were:

- a) Students learnt about the significance of World Consumer Rights Day
- b) They became aware about the various market malpractices that interfere with the rights of the consumers
- c) Students became conscious while using digital financial services such as internet and mobile banking, ATM, cards, e-wallet etc.

Introduction

The public sector is a part of the economy that comprises all organization that are owned and operated by the government. This includes everything from schools and hospitals to roads and bridges. The main purpose of the public sector is to provide services that are considered essential for the well-being of society.

Objectives of Public Sector in India

The objectives of the public sector in India can be divided into three categories:-

Social Objectives: The public sector aims at providing basic goods and services to the citizen. It also provides employment opportunities and promotes economic development.

Economic Objectives: The public sector

~~protects the interests of weaker sections of society and promotes exports.~~ key role in the development of infrastructure and encourages private investment.

Political Objectives:- The public sector protects the interests of weaker section of society and promotes exports.

The public sector has always been aimed at achieving certain socio-economic objectives. However, its performance over the years has not been up to the mark.

Important public sector Enterprise currently working in India

There were just about 5 enterprises in the public sector in India in 1954 but in march 2011 this was increased to 363 which includes 7 new defence PSUs. These enterprises represented a total investment of about ₹16.41 Lakh crore.

In march 2011, the share of cumulative investment stood at ₹. 666848 crore which shows an increase of 14.8% over the period of 2009 and 2010. During the years 2010 and 2011, the share of manufacturing in the gross block was about 27.8%. The share of mining, electricity, and services was 23.0%, 25.2% and 23.3% respectively.

The net profit of 158 profit-making public sector stood at ₹. 4,18,770 crore in 2010-11. The net loss of 62 loss making enterprises stood at ₹. 21693 crore during the same period.

Performance of Public Sector In India

Public Sector Performance is managed and controlled by the central, state and local govt. The performance of public sector enterprises is judged by net profit or loss annually.

Employment:- Public sector enterprises that are operating in India need a lot of man power and labour. This helps to provide employment to unlimited individuals according to their experience, education and capabilities.

Service Motive:- The main motive of working in public sector enterprises is to provide public utility services to large sections of societies irrespective of profit.

Monopoly:- Public sector enterprises are purely governmental oriented. These sectors do not face any type of competition from any private sector industries. The public sector is working on the basis of monopoly, semi-monopoly and oligopoly.

Model Employer:- Public sector enterprises are very much concerned with their employees. They take proper care of their employees and provide good wages, job security, proper working conditions, training and welfare facilities.

Problems of the Public Sector in India

There are several problems faced by Indian public sector enterprises that can be classified into three categories: managerial problems, financial problems, and operational problems.

Managerial Problems:- The public sector is plagued by red-tapism, bureaucracy, and corruption. These problems have led to inefficiency and poor quality of products and services.

Financial Problems:- Public sector enterprises are often dependent on the government for their financial needs. This dependence has led to a lack of autonomy and accountability.

Operational Problems:- Public sector enterprises are often hampered by outdated technology and processes. This has led to low productivity and high costs.

The public sector in India has been facing several problems over the years. These problems have adversely affected its performance and efficiency.

Conclusion

- ▶ The private sector were started long back but it was not because policy makers found conclusive evidence for its superiority.
- ▶ The public sector inspite of its defects is a driving force for sector in India because it takes initiative to develop infrastructure.
- ▶ Public sector provide foundations to the private sector.
- ▶ Private sector is superior in terms of efficiency and cost.
- ▶ Greater competition leads to more improvement and more innovative products.
- ▶ The private and public sector have to work together to develop the economy conditions both are equally responsible for it.
